The Rexall Store of Grant Holden, Yale

LOWER PRICES!

The policy of this store is fixed. We have maintained all along that the only possible way to do business was by "STAYING WITH THE MARKET." As prices decline we still hold to this policy.

New Prices Are In Effect

All cotton piece goods, silks, ribbons and all articles on which the market has changed are being sold at the new price basis, reductions ranging from twenty to thirty percent and some silks even more.

Will We Lose?

Certainly we will lose and lose heavy, but what of it? Every one must lose something before prices can go down. The manufacturer with raw material on hand will lose. The wholesaler is losing very heavily. The retailer is losing. The farmer is losing if he sells his crops at present prices, but prices can't go down unless we all lose on the goods in our possession.

You Are Safe

when buying goods at this store you can be sure of getting the right price. Our "Stay With the Market" policy works both ways, down as well as up. Now it's working down.

All Goods are Not Down

We spent two days this week in Detroit investigating prices. We visited three wholesale houses. We talked with department managers and buyers, the men who know conditions as near as they can be known. Some manufactured articles are not any lower and may not be for months. It is the general belief that nearly all reductions that will take effect this fall have already been made.

A Word to the Wise

A wise man would not think of being without a bank account—large or small—any more than the wise little squirrel would think of going through the summer without storing up nuts for the winter. We should all be wiser than the squirrel. Think it over—then ACT.
